At a Meeting of the Council of the Surtees Society, on the 13th of December 1850:

Resolved, That the Anglo-Saxon Hymnarium, from a Manuscript in the Library of the Dean and Chapter, Durham, with the addition of Hymns from any other sources which may seem expedient, be printed by the Society, under the Editorship of the Rev. J. Stevenson, upon the usual terms, as the volume for 1851.

W. G. Henderson, Secretary.

PREFACE.

A VERY few words will suffice to put the Reader in possession of what need be stated respecting the contents of this present volume.

The Council of the Surtees Society having already issued more than one Publication illustrative of the early language of our Island, and having found that the literary public sanctioned the estimate which they had formed of the value of these Works, have been encouraged to proceed with the Series, and to add from time to time, as the state of their finances enabled them, other volumes of a similar character. With such a project before them, their attention was naturally directed to a copy of the Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Church, which is deposited among the Manuscript treasures of the Library of the Dean and Chapter of Durham:[1] and leave for its publication having been obtained from that venerable body, it forms the basis of the present volume.

The Reader is cautioned, however, against assuming that this Manuscript, because now deposited in the Library of a Northern Cathedral, is therefore of [1] B. iii. 32.

Northern origin. There is no evidence to connect it with the Scriptorium of the distinguished Monastery within whose walls it is preserved; on the contrary, there are indications of a Southern birth-place.[1] The interlinear gloss is an indisputable specimen of Western Saxon. Its age is probably a little later than the Norman Conquest; it is clearly and elegantly, though not always correctly written; but its errors are neither so formidable nor so numerous as those which disfigure many of the Manuscripts of that period. An attempt has been made by a subsequent hand to amend some of these blunders, and in other respects to alter the earlier reading of the Latin — not always successfully, — circumstances which will account for the discrepancies which may here and there be detected between the original and the translation.

The Anglo-Saxon version exhibits no striking peculiarities. It is a good specimen of the ordinary Western Saxon of the period. The Student will observe many instances of the gradual melting of the Saxon into English by the rejection of the stricter forms of the earlier grammar.

[1] If the Editor might venture to hazard a conjecture, founded on nothing more definite than the style of writing and the general appearance and execution of the book, he would be inclined to attribute its origin to Winchester. According to Rud (Catalog. MSS. Codd. Ecclesiæ Dunelm., p. 174), it was given to the Library of Durham by Thomas Wharton, Esq.

This Manuscript has been adopted as the basis of our edition.

Additional assistance has been obtained from other sources, the more important of which are the following:—

The Cottonian Manuscript, Julius, A. vi., a vellum book, in small quarto, written in the eleventh century, a little earlier than the Durham copy. The first leaf is lost, having, in all probability, been removed in consequence of the illumination with which it had been ornamented. The Latin text which it affords coincides very closely with the Durham copy, though each occasionally corrects the errors of the other. The Saxon version is an independent one, differing radically from that here printed; although, as might naturally be expected, they have much in common. A few of the Hymns are provided with a musical notation.

The Cottonian Manuscript, Vespasian, D. xii. This copy is the earliest of all which the Editor has examined, having been written probably half a century before the Durham Manuscript, or Julius, A. vi. Its utility, however, as far as our present purpose is concerned, is much diminished by the method in which the scribe has treated the arrangement of its contents. After having transcribed the metrical Latin text, he has added a paraphrase of that text into easier prose, something on the plan adopted in the edition of the Delphin Classics, and to that paraphrase he has adapted his Anglo-Saxon version.

The Appendix to this volume contains a few Hymns derived from various sources. Their number might have been increased by a more extended search amongst the remains of our Saxon ancestors; but the present Collection will be found to embrace the bulk of the Hymns used in the Anglican Church before the introduction of the new element which came among us at the period of the Norman Conquest.

Cum mane nostrum cernimus
Redisse victis ostibus
Mundique luxum tempnimus
Panem salutis sumimus.
Hęc alma sit sollempnitas
Sit clara hec festivitas
Sit feriata gaudiis
Dies reducta ab inferis.
Gloria Tibi Domine.

[1] Inventor rutili dux bone luminis
Qui certis vicibus tempora dividis
Merso sole chaos ingruit horridum
Lucem redde tuis Christe fidelibus.
Quamvis innumero sidere regiam
Lunarique polum lampade pinxeris
Inpulsu silicis lumina nos tamen
Monstrans saxigeno semine querere.
Ne nesciret homo spem sibi luminis
In Christi solido corpore conditam
Qui dici stabilem se voluit petram
Nostris igniculis unde genus venit.

O res digna Pater quam tibi roscidæ
Votis principio grex tuus offerat
Luce qua tribuis nil preciosius
Luce qua reliqua premia cernimus.
Tu lux vera oculis lux quoque sensibus
Intus tu speculum tu speculum foris
Lumen quod famulans offero suscipe

HYMNUM DE SANCTO PETRO PAULOQUE.[1]

Felix per omnes festum mundi cardines
Apostolorum prepollet alacriter
Petri beati Pauli sacratissimi
Quos Christus almo consecravit sanguine
Aecclesiarum deputavit principes.
Hii sunt olive due coram Domino
Et candelabra luce radiantia
Preclara celi duo luminaria
Fortia solvunt peccatorum vincula
Portas Olymphi reserant fidelibus.
Habent supernas potestatem claudere
Sermone sedes pandere splendentia
Limina poli super alta sidera
Linguae eorum claves celi facte sunt
Larvas repellunt ultra mundi limites.
Petrus beatus catenarum laqueos
Christo jubente rupit mirabiliter
Custos ovilis et doctor ecclesię
Pastorque gregis conservator ovium
Arcet luporum truculentam rabiem.
Quodcunque vinclis super terram strinxerit
Erit in astris religatum fortiter
Et quod resolvit in terris arbitrio
Erit solutum super celi radium
In fine mundi judex erit seculi.
Non impar Paulus huic doctor gentium

HYMNUS IN PASSIONE DOMINI.[1]

Pange lingua gloriosi
Prælium certaminis
Et super crucis tropheum
Dic triumphum nobilem
Qualiter Redemptor orbis
Immolatus vicerit.

De parentis protoplasti
Fraude factor condolens
Quando pomi noxialis
Morsu mortem corruit
Ipse lignum tunc notavit
Damna ligni ut solveret.

Hoc opus nostre salutis
Ada depoposcerat
Multiformis proditoris
Ars ut artem falleret
Et medelam ferret inde
Hostis unde leserat.

Quando venit ergo sacri
Plenitudo temporis
Missus est ab arce Patris
Natus orbis Conditor
Atque ventre virginali
Caro factus prodiit.[2]

AD MATUTINAS.[1]

Lustra sex qui jam peracta
Tempus implens corporis
Se volente natus ad hoc

Agnus in cruce levatur
Immolandus stipite.

Hic aceto[2] fel arundo
Sputa clavis lancea
Mite corpus perforatur
Sanguis unda profluit
Terra pondus[3] astra mundus
Quo lavantur flumine.

Crux fidelis inter omnes

Fronde flore germine
Dulce lignum dulces clavos
Dulce pondus sustinet.

Flecte ramos arbor alta
Tensa laxa viscera
Et rigor lentescat ille
Quem dedit nativitas
Et superni membra Regis
Niti tendas[4] stipite.

Quem sacer cruor perunxit
Fusus agni corpore.
